MATCH PREVIEW – Michael Duffy

Bray Wanderers have failed to beat Athlone Town in the two meetings this season. Athlone came from a goal down to win 2-1 at the Carlisle Grounds in April. Dylan Barnett put Wanderers ahead on seven minutes before Kurtis Byrne scored twice for Athlone on 11 and 15 minutes. Wanderers ended the game with ten men when Ryan Graydon was dismissed three minutes from time.

In the return game at the Athlone Town stadium in June the sides played out a scoreless draw in a game in which Graydon was sent off on 34 minutes.

Athlone Town started the season well and were top of the table when they visited the Carlisle Grounds last April. They were unbeaten in their opening five league games with four wins and a draw. A surprise 2-1 home defeat to Cabinteely in game six saw the Midlander's go on a three-game losing run.

That losing run was ended with a 2-1 home win over Cobh Ramblers in May, but three successive league defeats followed. Athlone won one, drew two and lost six in a nine-game run from the end of April to early July.

Following a 6-0 away defeat to UCD in the Belfield Bowl last month the club appointed former Ireland under 19 manager Paul Doolin as their new manager. The side defeated Galway United 1-0 at home in Doolin's first game in charge but were defeated 3-1 away to Cork City last week.

Athlone Town's away record this season shows three wins, three draws and five defeats. Curtis Byrne and ex-Wanderer Shane Barnes are the leading league goal scorers for Athlone this season on five goals apiece. Another ex-Wanderers Adam Wixted has three goals alongside James Doona and Stephen Meaney.

Bray Wanderers are unbeaten in their last five home games with four wins and one draw since losing at home to Shelbourne in June.

Gary Shaw's hat trick last week against UCD was the 19th hat trick scored by a Bray Wanderers player since the club entered the League of Ireland in 1985. It was also the second time that a Bray Wanderers player has scored a hat trick and ended up on the losing side. Ryan Brennan scored three times away to UCD in the Belfield Bowl in an FAI cup tie in May 2016 in a game which also ended 4-3 to the students.

QUIGLEY'S WORLD OF FOOTBALL

"Exit Exeter"

Getting relegated from the English Football League to the National League is an occupational hazard for teams in the lower divisions. For some it can be the beginning of the end, for others simply the beginning of the next chapter, a rebuilding process. Carlisle United went out of the League and returned, as did Leyton Orient and Lincoln City. Wrexham, on the other hand, have been stuck in the fifth tier National League since 2008.

For me though, the fall and rise of Exeter City was the best comeback of all, using their National League [then the Football Conference] years between 2003 and 2008 as a chance to enter fan ownership [the Exeter City Supporters Trust] so that they came back stronger. They did come back stronger, and haven't looked back since.

Exeter City are a club with an interesting nickname. To trace the origins of 'The Grecians' tag you have to go back to the club's formation in 1901 from the amalgamation of Exeter United and St Sidwells United. The St Sidwells parish is located beyond the city walls, and so has parallels with Homer's Iliad, where Greek forces laid siege to the walls of Troy. Bet you never knew soccer could be so interesting!

Being based in Devon means that City contest several West Country derbies, depending on which other sides out of Yeovil Town, Plymouth Argyle, Torquay United, Bristol City and Bristol Rovers are in their league in any given year, which means just Joey Barton's Bristol Rovers for the 2021-22 League Two campaign [the fans will tell you that Plymouth are their biggest rivals].

Exeter have never ventured into the top two tiers, a bit like my own club Rochdale. Their return to the EFL in 2008 was followed by a climb into League One for three seasons; since 2012 they have been members of League Two, so 2021-22 will celebrate a decade of membership of the fourth tier.

Exeter have some famous fans. Chris Martin of Coldplay is a fan, as are Joss Stone, Noel Edmonds and Adrian Edmondson. David Pleat – who went on to manage Luton Town and Tottenham Hotspur – played for the club in the 1960's.

Two names I will always associate with 'The Grecians' are Paul Tisdale, their long-serving manager [he was in charge between 2006 and 2018, an incredible amount of time in the modern professional game; for 19 days in 2018 he was English soccer's longest-serving manager] and Tony Kellow, goal-scorer extraordinaire during three spells at the club between 1976 and 1988 [129 goals in 332 games]. Kellow was in the side for arguably their finest moment historically – a run to the 1980-81 FA Cup quarter-finals, where they lost out to eventual winners Tottenham Hotspur after 'giant-killing' Newcastle United and Leicester City along the way.

A final word on The Grecians, and it's not a footballing one. I can't help but associate the nickname with the Grecian 2000 men's hair colouring preparation. Adds for this product were always on television in my youth; the product made news recently when the manufacturers were forced to replace the lead acetate with bismuth citrate for the progressive colourant.

Enjoy the game tonight. As our season enters the home stretch we remain firmly behind the team as they attempt to finish in a play-off position

Happy Birthday FAI

Mícheál Ó hUanacháin looks back at the turbulent times when the FAI was founded one hundred years ago

This summer, the football community marks the centenary of the establishment of a separate governing body in Dublin, challenging the authority of "The Irish Football Association, Ltd" (the "Limited" was very important to the Belfast administrators, and was rarely omitted from its official pronouncements). 10 September 2021 is the 100th anniversary of the first competitive games under the new regime.

The decision to leave the IFA, coming as it did while the guerrilla warfare between the IRA and the British forces was still in progress with no end in sight, was clearly not a consequence of the Treaty, yet to be negotiated, nor as we will see a response to partition, which was already in train.

By far the single most important reason for the Southern impulse to separate from Belfast was to be found within football itself.

From the foundation of the Irish Football Association in 1892, the focus of the game's administrators on the island was inward, on Belfast and the surrounding area. That attitude was apparently unaffected by the formation of the Leinster Football Association, its first divisional body, twelve years later, and still less notice was taken of the establishment of the Munster FA in 1901.

In fact, the Belfast body's late and derisory response to the latter's appeal for funds to help them get on their feet was just another example of the parent body's lack of interest in anything outside the North-East. Of course, Killarney was a jewel when it came to hosting the International Football Association Board meeting in February 1905, but that was different, wasn't it?

The years immediately after the Great War saw a series of increasingly high-profile snubs to the southern clubs, the LFA and the footballing public. The LFA at its annual meeting in the summer of 1918 announced a financial loss, and only 77 clubs affiliated. By contrast, the IFA had ring-fenced its pre-war kitty of more than £2,000 and the Irish League was also in the black. The Belfast body told the LFA to get its activities back on a sound footing, but when Leinster asked for £300 for that purpose, the IFA gave them £50.

No international match was played in Dublin from 1918 to 1920: all home matches were played in Belfast. That decision, though perhaps unsurprising, was hardly helpful to relations within the sport.

With the Irish League suspended during the War, Shelbourne, Bohemians and Belfast Celtic declined to join a revived League for 1918/19, and the project collapsed.

Shelbourne's 1919 Irish Cup Semi-Final in Belfast was decided in favour of Linfield after extra time: the practice had been that a drawn game would see a replay set for Dublin. The Reds won the following year's trophy by default when both participants in the other Semi-Final were expelled!

In January 1921 Belfast Celtic, Bohemians and Shelbourne were excluded from the City Cup. The same month, St James Gate withdrew from the Intermediate Cup when their Semi-Final match was moved to Belfast.

The following month, IFA officials made a big to-do about removing what were described as "Sinn Féin flags" before an amateur international when Ireland beat France 2-1 at Parc des Princes on 8 February.

The final straw was yet another drama featuring Shelbourne, who had again reached the Semi-Final of the Irish Cup, drawing with Glenavon in Belfast in March 1921. There would be a replay this time – but the Dublin club was aghast when without consultation the IFA agreed to facilitate the Belfast club by not forcing them to travel to Dublin for that match.

There was some basis for security concerns, all right, but conditions in Belfast itself were no less unsettled than those in Dublin, and Shelbourne's decision not to travel was as inevitable as the rift that was now clearly visible between the IFA and the Leinster body.

In April 1921 the Leinster association canvassed opinion among its affiliated clubs on the possibility of severing the link with Belfast, and on 1 June 1921 in the Molesworth Hall in Dublin the LFA's annual meeting 'almost unanimously' voted to end its affiliation with the IFA.

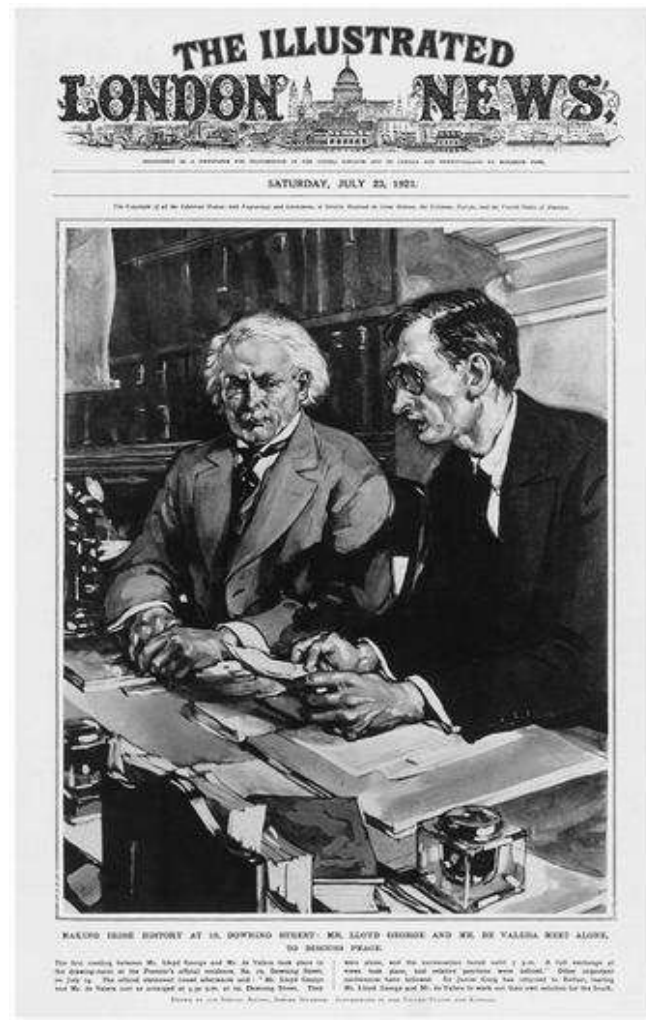

The administrators set about organising a League and Cup for 1921/22 even before they achieved the formal establishment of the Football Association of Ireland, whose draft rules were ratified at another Molesworth Hall meeting on 3 September, just a week before the new season opened. In July, the 28 clubs of the Falls & District League in Belfast had applied to affiliate to the new body, and they were eventually accepted.

On the political front, partition was already in law under the UK's 1920 Government of Ireland Act.

The post-war General Election in December 1918 had seen the Irish Parliamentary Party almost completely wiped out by Sinn Féin candidates, and when fresh elections were held on 24 May 1921 for parliaments north and south, the southern ones were 'virtual' as all the candidates were unopposed.

King George V would formally open the new Northern Ireland parliament in Belfast City Hall on 22 June 1921 – but for many nationalists (and most if not all republicans) partition was by no means a done deal: the War of Independence was far from over and the outcome still in the balance. There was even a provision in the Government of Ireland Act for the two parliaments to unite if they so choose.

That Lloyd George and De Valera agreed a truce on 9 July 1921, to come into effect on the 11th – inside a month since the King's cogent speech to the Northern parliament – had no bearing on the decision of the Leinster football community that they had had enough of Belfast's bullying: that die was already cast.

A news magazine's impression of Dev and Lloyd George negotiating the Truce

There is little or no surviving evidence that the LFA was in effect jumping the gun on partition, and the new FAI's acceptance of the Falls league as an affiliate suggests rather that they sought to replace the IFA as a body for the whole island. That view would be underpinned later when the Derry League tried to affiliate with the Dublin body, and it would also be the basis of their initial approach to FIFA.

Fan Profile – Padraic Moran

Name: Padraic Moran.

Age: 37.

Supporter since? 1990.

How you started supporting? My family brought me to the 1990 FAI Cup final and from there I never stopped. I was six.

Favourite player? Wes Charles - a Trojan at the back. A great leader and very rarely lost a ball in the air.

Favourite match? Derry City away in 2001.

Derry had not been beaten all season at home and we had to win as we were fighting relegation.

Padraig Moran scored for Derry after 19 minutes, Paul Keegan equalised on 25 and Jason Byrne put us in the lead on 44.

For the last 20 minutes, we never got out of the box. Matt Gregg pulled off heroics and we held on, there was 14 who travelled that day.

Favourite goal? Well I have two. Jake Kelly's equaliser against Monaghan and Chris Shields' winning penalty in the shootout. Neither were spectacular but so, so important for the club. The wall collapsing that night saved us after Chris Shields scored the own goal.

Favourite away ground? The Brandywell. The first time I went up, we had been delayed with traffic so hadn't stopped for food and the locals heard us saying we were hungry and before you knew, plates of sandwiches appeared! We won 1-2 that night. The atmosphere is always brilliant.

Best 11? Chris O'Connor; Pip Keogh, Mick Doohan, Wes Charles, Maurice Farrell; Gary McCabe, Graham Kelly, Eddie Gormley, David Tyrell; Jason Byrne, Paul Keegan (late 90's/early 00's Paul Keegan).
